

The New York Life IndexFlex Annuity

Crediting and Interest Rates as of: 02/16/2026

Initial term strategies

Money invested in the Index-linked Account is eligible for credits based on the performance of the stock market index you select. With the Cap Rate crediting method, if performance for the index over the one-year measuring period is positive, the account is credited at the full year rate of return for the index, up to the predetermined Cap Rate. With the Trigger Rate method, if performance for the index over the one-year measuring period is zero or positive, the account is credited at the predetermined Trigger Rate. In either case, if index performance is negative, the account receives no index-linked credit, but will never lose money.

Cap and Trigger Rates are set at contract issue and will not change throughout the Initial Term, which corresponds to the surrender charge period. At the end of the Initial Term, index-linked rates will renew for 1-year Recurring Term periods. Contact your financial professional for information about current crediting rates for the Recurring Term Strategies.
